Sustainability

Biocom provides a central forum for members to showcase cutting edge and relevant trends in sustainable lab, office, and building practices. We also work with member companies to achieve their sustainability goals by connecting them with government resources, through ongoing education at our committee meetings and workshops, and by linking sustainable suppliers with industry professionals.

"Meet the Inspector"

Biocom's "Meet the Inspector" Workshop series brings together members and regulators in jurisdictions throughout the Bay Area to educate inspectors about the life science industry, share regulatory procedures and legislative updates, and provide an anonymous forum for feedback. Building relationships between inspectors and our industry can lead to increased compliance and greater inspection consistency.

Connecting with Decision Makers

We know that our members have questions and concerns about employee security, housing, transportation, and other big picture policy challenges, so we work with a variety of elected officials and government staff to provide the latest updates to our members. We've had presentations from city economic development staffs, law enforcement, local mayors, and others to share information on a wide array of issues.

Facilities Receptions

Biocom partners with other facilities associations to host an annual reception, bringing together peers in an informal setting. This is a relaxed event to enjoy conversation and camaraderie with facilities and EH&S professionals and providers.

Continuing Education Opportunities

Facilities and EH&S regulations and responsibilities are in constant flux. Biocom provides workshops and educational sessions on topics from hazardous waste management to Business Continuity to plastics handling. Have an idea for a topic we should offer? Let us know!
